Family Communication about Prejudice and Discrimination

The purpose of this research project is to investigate family communication concerning experiences of prejudice and discrimination. Participation in this study involves completion of a one-on-one interview in which you will be asked about your experiences with prejudice and discrimination and family communication about prejudice and racial-ethnic identity. You will also be asked to provide general demographic information. To participate in this study, you must be at least 19 years old and identify as racial-ethnic minority in the United States. You will earn two (2) research credits for participating in this study. If you are interested or would like more information, please contact Kimberly Blitch at kblitch2@unl.edu.
